Attitudes toward American higher education range from self complacent pride to outright criticism. The former is usually expressed in festive speeches and the reports of university presidents to faculties and boards. These addresses should not be dismissed by the objective critic; although in general they are not sufficiently extensive and analytical, they contain valid information that is important for a balanced appraisal of higher education in America. While complacency must be avoided if a zest for constant improvement is going to be maintained, it is necessary to appreciate the many positive aspects of our system of higher education to determine the areas that need change. The U.S. News and World Report of October 26, 1987, made the following statement, which I fully accept: "Whatever the criticisms of U.S. education, in any list of world-class universities most of the entries come from among America's 200-odd 'national' universities." And a few pages earlier: "It is this richness and variety that has made U.S. higher education the envy of so many students in other countries and why this year more than 300,000 of them are enrolled in American colleges and universities." Anyone familiar with European universities will accept these statements without hesitation. And yet....
