When returning World War II veteran, Jersey, a nickname pinned on him by his buddies, finds a one hundred year old letter, in a sooty railroad shack, its contents propel him into the world of Civil War Georgia where he witnesses the heart-wrenching lives of young Will and Mary. Tormented by the catastrophic loss of his Mary, and their newborn baby, his father and mother and the small farm that was his home, Confederate soldier, Will Vollmer embarks upon a cosmic search to recapture the life he knew before it was tragically ripped from him by the ravages of the war. Along the celestial highway he travels, Will meets Mary, his father, mother and child in previous and future incarnations. In a somber snow covered night on New Year day 1900, in a railroad yard in New Jersey, as Will's life ebbs, his long sought dreams are realized. But, the story does not end there. "A romantic fantasy that transcends time, place, life and death. A unique love story ... evocative ... an emotional read ... a surprise ending." Editor's Review
