Denice Barrie has a system that will help you make the best possible case in court. Do you have a legal problem but no lawyer to help? Then you could be one of the growing number of Canadians going to court alone. Between the rising cost of hiring a lawyer and cutbacks to legal aid, more and more people are faced with either representing themselves, or walking away from their legal problems. But what if I told you that with some hard work, it was possible to manage your own case and reach an outcome as good as if you had been represented by a lawyer? No one knows your case better than you do – but you need to learn how to prepare and present it. This book will show you how. Traveling from one guidepost or “waymark” to the next, you will learn how to take all the bits and pieces of paper you now think of as your case and turn them into an organized presentation in court. If you are on your own with a legal problem, this book is the compass you need.
