This is a story that spans a Century! Starting with a young man in 1964 and weaving back through connections that reach to the Civil War Battle of the Wilderness in 1864, the story brings history alive. the young man overcomes the "fears of ignorance" to write poems with a widowed old man living in what locals believe to be a haunted cottage. The young man must over come the same fears to reach out to a local negro couple to verify an old legend his father had originally shared. The connections brought forth bring all four characters to an exciting common ground of caring. This is a story of compassion and beauty as well as history and intrigue. As the book invites: "For now, settle back and let me tell you a story."
