For the past few months, J.T. Whitlock has been happy with his dusty chalkboards and bored college students, because it means he hasn't been bothered by any ghosts desperate to pass on messages to him. An English professor and a reluctant medium, J.T. is hoping for some uninterrupted time to further his relationship with "Brick" Brickman, a fedora-wearing, deeply closeted detective with the Atlanta Major Crimes Division. But who is the spirit person who begins appearing to J.T. in the park? And what does he want from J.T.?

Meanwhile, another young man, the nephew of Brick's partner, has gone missing, and as a favor to the young man's family, J.T. agrees to do a little sniffing around. His investigations bring him face to face with his ghost from the park and some startling revelations about the nephew's activities. Brick has to defend his lover when other detectives question his involvement in yet another case, and they both have to figure out a way to protect themselves as more deep, dark secrets are revealed and J.T. becomes a target in a killer's cruel games.
