The cat and mouse game continues as Jade and Cody have revealed their feelings toward one another and the two are forged into drama and chaos on behalf of pop singer Allison Brodus, better known as Aphrodite. Jade becomes confused once realizing there is no escaping true love and there is nowhere to hide when your heart mocks you of making the wrong decisions. But what will come of she and Troy's relationship after all of these confessions have been aired out and understood?

Cody struggles with day to day activities once his daughter becomes more outspoken than usual and is brutally honest about his situation, yet he doesn't know how to handle it with the pressures of facing the fact that his mistakes have caught up to him and there is a large chance that his best friend has yet again slipped through his fingers, but this time maybe for good.

Even Troy isn't out of drama's reach when an old flame of his steps out of the past where she belongs and falls right into his lap. Or should we say "karma" considering the amount of hurt he's put Jade through.

Allison steps up her antics a few thousand volts and gives the word "crazy" a whole new meaning when she takes her games a little too far and goes after someone who least expects it when trying to win over Cody's affection.

Dishonesty doesn't have a specific being it avoids as drama reaches a new peak and temperatures rise, lines are crossed and dirty laundry is aired for the entire world to see on live television. New bonds are formed and new love blossoms in part two of this drama, but one incident will put all of our beloved, and some hated, characters on the front page of every major tabloid and every gossip website and blog known to man. Then one simple act of defiance will leave you breathless and wondering just exactly how and when it happened.

Will Cody and Jade even survive this drama-filled saga? Or will they fall underneath the pressure of the media and pandemonium that unfolds and separate for good?
